Sales Promotion Literature Found in the Library or in Library Materials or on Cars in the Parking Lot

The library does not condone the practice of private businesses advertising their products or services on library property. This includes leaving flyers, business cards and other kinds of promotional pieces on counters and shelves, in the information rack in the lobby, in books, on car windshields, etc.

When these items are discovered, they should be brought to the Library Director who can inform the businesses that their actions are in violation of library policy.
